OCTOBER IS THE MONTH OF THE ROSARY

In addition to the daily Rosary that takes place during the week, all through the month of October, we will pray the Rosary after 4:00 p.m. Mass on Saturdays and after 8:30 a.m. Mass on Sundays. On these special days, our focus will be praying for world peace, as Pope Leo has asked us all to do.

From the Pastor's Pen

TWENTY-SEVENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME: The Fruitless Vineyard

The Old Testament tells us that God cared for His people as a good gardener cares for his vineyard, yet they failed to produce the desired fruits. We are the new people of God, the vineyard planted and cared for by Christ. God looks to us to produce the fruits of justice, holiness, and peace. This is a great privilege and a great challenge too.

When the lieutenant thought he was calling the mess hall, a sleepy voice answered, "Yeah, whaddaya want?" A bit pompously, the lieutenant snarled, "That's no way to answer the phone when an officer calls. Now let's start over. Pretend I just called you." "Okay," the voice on the other end replied, "Captain's cabin. Captain speaking." Sometimes we think we're pretty much a big wheel, until someone else takes us down a few notches.

In our Gospel that's what Isaiah and Jesus did as they told their stories. Their listeners thought they were big wheels, the most important people in the world, because they were the leaders of God's people (who are represented in both stories as a vineyard). Isaiah and Jesus reminded them they were working for God and God was the One in charge. God judged they were incompetent leaders and were doing great spiritual harm to God's people.

This weekends' readings ask us a searching question: What fruit is God finding in the vineyard of our lives? God has cared for us, entrusted us with gifts, and called us to bear fruit —not for ourselves alone, but for the good of others and the glory of his name.

In the first reading (Is 5:1-7), Isaiah sings of a vineyard lovingly prepared by its owner. The owner does everything possible for it, yet it produces wild grapes instead of good fruit. Isaiah explains the image: the vineyard is the house of Israel, and God looks for justice and righteousness. Instead, He finds bloodshed and cries of distress. This is not only a warning to ancient Israel. It is a word for every community and every disciple. God gives us life, faith, relationships, opportunities, and the care of one another. He does not ask us merely to look religious; He asks that our faith take root in the way we treat people. Do we defend the vulnerable? Do we speak truthfully? Do we make room for mercy, fairness, and peace in our homes and community? We can live this reading by examining our choices this week and taking one concrete step to bring justice, kindness, or reconciliation to someone who needs it.

In the second reading (Phil 4:6-9), Saint Paul writes from prison, yet he urges the Philippians not to be consumed by anxiety. Instead, they are to bring their needs to God in prayer, with thanksgiving. Then Paul tells them to dwell on what is true, honorable, just, pure, lovely, and worthy of praise—and put into practice what they have learned. Paul is not pretending that suffering and worry do not exist. He is teaching us where to bring them. Prayer does not always remove our difficulties at once, but it places them in God's hands and steadies our hearts. And the things we choose to dwell on shape the people we become. If our minds are filled only with resentment, fear, or suspicion, those things can take over our lives. But when we return to God in prayer and attend to what is good and true, we become more able to live with hope and generosity. We can live this reading by bringing one particular worry to God in prayer each day, giving thanks for His gifts, and choosing to act on what is true and good.

In the Gospel (Mt 21:33-43), Jesus tells the parable of the vineyard tenants. The owner entrusts his vineyard to tenants and sends servants to collect its produce. The tenants beat and kill the servants. Then the owner sends his son, but they kill him too, hoping to take the inheritance inheritance. Jesus is speakingabout the leaders who rejected God's messengers and would soon reject Him. The parable also reminds us that the vineyard belongs to God. We are entrusted with its care; we are not its owners. Our gifts, our influence, our families, our parish, and the earth itself are given to us for a time. The question is not simply, "What do I possess?" but, "What fruit am I producing with what God has entrusted to me?" The son in the parable points to Jesus, rejected and killed, yet made the cornerstone. Human beings may reject God's way, but God's saving purpose is not defeated. Christ remains the foundation of our lives and the source of the fruit God desires: faith, love, forgiveness, justice, and service. We can live this Gospel by treating what we have as God's gift and using at least one of our gifts—our time, attention, skill, or resources—to serve another person.

Together, these readings call us to be faithful stewards. Isaiah asks whether our lives bear the fruit of justice. Paul shows us how prayer and good thoughts shape a peaceful heart. Jesus reminds us that the vineyard belongs to God and that we are accountable for its care. The stone which the builders rejected has become the cornerstone; this was the Lord's doing, and it is a marvel in our eyes.

South Africa is a country blessed by God in a great many ways. It is a large country, has a good climate, and is rich in agricultural land and minerals, especially gold and diamonds. But the country, which should have been a haven for all the peoples of Southern Africa, became instead a haven for a privileged white minority. Many people tried in vain to change South Africa's iniquitous apartheid system. Finally, Nelson Mandela appeared on the scene. He too tried to bring about reforms. But like reformers before him, he was rejected. Worse, he was hounded by the government and ended up spending 27 years in prison. But he not only survived, but came out of prison with the respect of his enemies and of the entire world. Furthermore, he came out without bitterness. In fact, he came out smiling and immediately sought reconciliation with the leaders of the regime that kept him in prison all those years. But even greater things were to follow. The man once rejected was to become the President of a new multi-racial South Africa. The stone which the builders rejected became the cornerstone of a new and better building.

Mandela's is a marvelous story, one of the great stories of the century. What makes it so great is the fact that in it good finally triumphs over evil. Make no mistake about it, what was done to Mandela (and to others before him) was evil. Hedid not deserve to be treated like that. His only crime was to seek justice for his brothers and sisters. But in the end, good came out of this evil. A new, free society emerged. Mandela's story helps us to understanding Jesus' story of the vinedressers. May receiving Jesus in the Eucharist help us become a fruitful vineyard: a people who pray with trust, practice what is good, and make God's justice and mercy visible in the world.
